

To Whom it May Concern,

One of the best "Quality of Life" things to have happened for my family and me has been our multiple subscriptions to XM Satellite radio.

The greater choice in programming, the lack of endless commercials and the absence of inanely nattering DJ's, as well as the crisp clarity of the quality of sound has been a welcome addition to our cars and home.

With less frustrating drivel coming from the car speakers, my wife says that I show less signs of "road rage" when I drive now!

One of the great things about being an American is the freedom and competition that our free enterprise system brings to us. If I dislike broadcast programming so much that I am willing to pay for a better product, I would be greatly disturbed if politicians that I vote for did anything to endanger those types of freedoms.

As a religious minister, I do not have a national soapbox, but I DO have quite an extensive network of contacts within my community and state and I WOULD use whatever influence I have to oppose any elected official who threatened my enjoyment of satellite radio.
